STAY-AT-HOMES TO ELECT PRES.

USUAL NON-VOTER HOLDS BALANCE OF POWER

If the usual stay-at-homes on election day could only realize how important their vote would be in the election next Tuesday we believe there wouldn't be any of them neglecting to vote.

Many capable home-makers and good mothers have taken little or no interest in our elections in the past. They seem to have taken too much for granted that the men-folk and ardent suffragists would attend to that matter satisfactorily. If they only knew, their votes might become the winning votes, according to which side they voted.

This election is so decidedly important that every eligible voter in Crawford county should do his duty at this time and VOTE. Don't let any member of your family fail to vote. Anyone who may be unable to get down to the poles because of illness, may have a ballot brought to their home by an election inspector, upon application.

Dad should see that mother and the other eligible of the family vote, and mother should see that dad does his duty; and the kids should see to it that their parents don't forget to vote. Let's have the biggest vote Crawford county has ever polled.

The Language of a Great Statesman. Remembering the bible words, "Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh," it is a matter of intense interest to read in part such words as these: "We can never afford to rest at ease in the comfortable assumption that right ideas always prevail by some virtue of their own. In the long run they do. But there can be and there have been periods of centuries when the world slumped back toward darkness merely because great masses of men became impregnated with wrong ideas and wrong social philosophies. The declines of civilization have been born of wrong ideas. Most of the wars of the world, including the recent one, have been fought by the advocates of contrasting ideas of social philosophy."

The author of these words is none other than Herbert Hoover, America's peerless leader of men, who has offered to become the servant of the American people in the position of President. November 6th becomes our Judgment Day in this generation.

THOS. CASSIDY.

TO LEARN WHERE THE TROUT GO

Lansing, Oct. 29.—Does the brook trout, like the cat and a certain species of pigeon, have homing tendencies? This is one question that might well be asked after one hears of a recent discovery made by Jan Metzelaar, fish specialist on the staff of the conservation department. Mr. Metzelaar has been engaged for the past few weeks in affixing metal tags to trout that were being released in Michigan streams. The tags will be used to establish, to some extent at least, the migratory habits of the trout. It is expected that sportsmen making catches will report to the state department where and under what conditions they made the catch of tagged trout.

But Mr. Metzelaar was not prepared to realize immediate results. Three and one-half days after he had planted a brook trout 15 miles from Grayling, the fish showed up at the hatchery. In other words, the trout had made the homecoming at the rate of 5 miles per day, which, almost anyone will admit, is pretty steady and speedy swimming for a small fish.

The trout was prompted by instinct to swim upstream at this time of year and probably did not have any idea that he was returning to the old homestead.

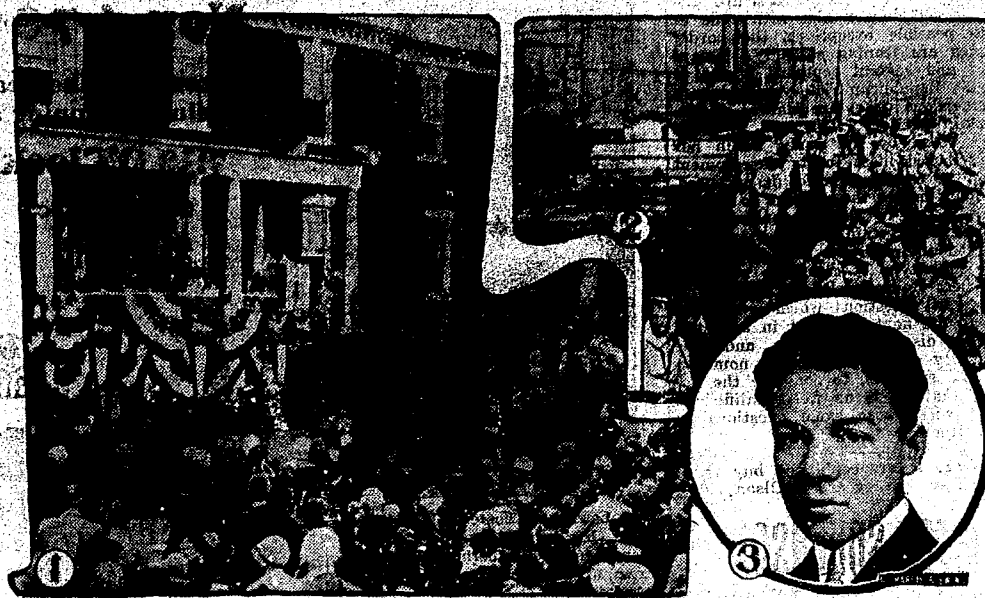

Nevertheless, he was back at Grayling and Mr. Metzelaar saw the specimen with his own eyes. The fish had jumped over the splash board and was trying to get into the pond. How long he had been at the hatchery was not known. He may have made the trip in a day, but it isn't likely.

The speed accomplished is only an incidental matter in the investigation that the department is planning. The experts desire to learn, if possible, where all the trout go that are planted every year. If they are going out into the great lakes or are migrating to other streams, the department believes it should know, for saving of money, time and fish could be made to the state.

While there is a good deal of interest attached to all species of trout, the rainbow is the fellow that Mr. Metzelaar is interested in particularly. Just how much territory this fellow takes in during his wanderings is not known. In several instances he has been found several miles away from his original home. Rainbows have been trying to ascend the Elk Rapids into Elk Lake near Traverse City. Fifty or sixty miles away at Elk Lake is the nearest rainbow colony. Did the fish swim all that way? Commercial fishermen have been known to net the rainbows in Saginaw Bay. In this case the fish probably came out of the Au Gres river but in any event they did a lot of swimming and seem to have no fear of the large bodies of water.

In the upper peninsula a number of well-to-do sportsmen formed a club. They decided that they were going to have fishing, as was fishing, on their stream. They planted year in and year out, yet the number of trout did not materially increase. Mystified by their experience they are going to try the banding idea themselves. Here they have been pouring fish into the stream, and the fish cost a pretty penny, and without any apparent results. Did the planted fish head for Lake Superior and then wander up other streams that empty into the big lakes. If so, this club was giving Michigan a life in its fine state-wide program of game fish planting.

Incidentally, Mr. Metzelaar has decided that no rainbows will be tagged this year. The 5,000 rainbows reserved for this experiment will be given another year in which to grow. They were not considered large enough to carry the tags this season.

HAVING FINE TRIP IN PHILIPPINES

Fourth of series of letters by Lieut. R. Emerson Bates, U. S. Army, written from the Philippines.

Dear Dad and Mother:

From the hemp fields we went to the Moro village. We had to walk about a mile. On the road we met one of the Moros, a datu who was visiting a couple of his wives. He was from Cotobato but had come over to visit his wives who were there. I later got a picture of them. You know the Moros are Mohammedan and the Government permits plural marriages in order to conciliate them.

The datu is a chief, but he may be chief of only a few men so the term doesn't mean much. Altogether we saw probably twenty men in the village and four were datus.

This village was not much different from the ordinary Filipino village except for the people in it. A couple of the men wore the red fez and all the others wore flat turbans. One wore the green cloth turban of a hadji, a man who has made a pilgrimage to Mecca. These Moros were all very friendly and smiled continually showing their black teeth stained from chewing betel nuts.

This was our first experience with the Moros but the next day I saw sufficient to believe the Filipino is much superior to the Moro. Although I came down here full of sympathy for the Moro on account of the stories of their oppression by the Filipinos. We were due to arrive at Cotobato two days after leaving Davao but at the harbor there was bad Captain made a stop of five hours at a little place called Milbuk to permit us to enter Cotobato in the daytime. There was a small lumber mill at Milbuk. On passing the mill we passed two Moro women taking a bath. But the arrival of a group of strangers only fifty feet away didn't seem to disturb them in the least. It was the same thru the village. All the children were naked, several of the women wore only a loin cloth and most of the men wore only a skirt. The houses were hovels about six feet square and three feet high, made of anything that could be tied or thrown together. I never imagined any place where humans lived could smell as badly. If that was a sample of the Moros, they certainly are a filthy, dirty lot.

We stopped at the company store on the way back and found a group of Manobas there. They are a race of wild men who live in the mountains—natives. One resembled the American Indian more than any other tribe I have seen over here. One of the women with him had eight or ten brass rings in each ear. Naturally I got a picture of her. I have kept my camera going constantly and to date have taken over six hundred pictures. While waiting for the boat to come in, I saw one of the Manobas with a strange looking plant. He offered to sell it for two pesos but when I told him it was too much he gave it to me. There were two plants and when I got them on board the boat I learned they were a species of orchid, called over here Waling-waling and each plant would cost twenty pesos in Manila.

Our next stop was at Cotobato. This city was about eight miles up the river so we had a long trip to get there, but it was worth it. Everybody got the buying habit and you should have seen the "booty" in the boat coming home. The city itself was nothing but a bunch of Chinese shops that sold only rice and canned goods. But one shop branched out and had Moro stuff for sale. I got a Moro sun hat made of straw, a Kulintang or Moro gong, a brass betel nut box and a couple bamboo vases. I also got a sarong, a piece of native Moro woven cloth about five feet wide and ten feet long that the Moros use for a skirt, gown, mosquito net or what not. At the boat we were besieged by a couple of Moros trying to sell some more sarongs, but I had my fill for the day.

We left Cotobato at noon and arrived at Porang at two. There used to be an American fort there but it had long ago been turned over to the Philippine constabulary. We walked up to see the place and called on the officer in charge, a Lt. Bargas, a Filipino. One of his first words were to come in and take our choice of the Moro weapons he had. As he only had four there, we had to draw lots and I lost out, but the Chaplain with us won a Moro spear and not wanting it, he gave it to me so I was lucky after all. The other weapons he distributed included a panabas that had been used by a Moro Murderer. One of the other two were homemade revolvers called polywontubes as near as I can spell it. We then all migrated down to the Barrio which was but little better than the one at Milbuk. One of the men saw another panabas in the tienda and bought it. That purchase together with the sight of our weapons we had received from the constabulary officer, caused the natives to bring out their weapons for sale. Almost all the officers got a panabas. I saw one with a fine carved and brass handle and a blade with fillet work on it that I wanted but I wouldn't pay more than six pesos for it and they wouldn't sell for less than eight pesos. I purchased a kampanian, another style weapon, that every one agrees was the prize purchase made at Porang. It is about three feet long with a carved wood handle and fretwork on the back of the blade. We cooled this morning at Malangas after an all night run from Porang. Just before we were ready to leave one of the crew knowing I had the orchid pointed out a tree near the beach with another variety on it so we went ashore and came back with two arm loads. I don't know the name of these. There were no flowers on them but they are almost ready to bloom. We also got another kind of parasite called "pie de diablo" devil's foot.

The last stop we made was at Port Bonga. We just had time to go ashore for a few minutes. But I had long enough to see a very neat Filipino house with two orchid plants in bloom. A little girl was there when I stepped to look at them she said "hello," so I asked if her father was in and when he came out I told him I was admiring his flowers. He asked me to come in which I did. He introduced me to his wife. They were a very neat, well appearing couple, well educated and above the average. I sat on the porch and visited with them for about fifteen minutes and when I left I had one of the plants that was in bloom and another that was not in bloom.

My trip was scheduled at first for twenty-five days and so I got thirty days detached service. However the schedule we are sailing on is twenty-nine days and we are three days late. So tomorrow we are going to have to radio for an extension. I haven't heard from you or Betty since I've been on the trip, but didn't expect to as I knew we would be jumping all around. I ought to have a lot of letters when I get home.

Everything of interest I see and every picture I take I think of you all and wish you could be with me. I am sure enjoying this trip. Just about a year from now and I'll be home with you all again.

Love to you all,

EMERSON.

SPORTSMEN CO-OPERATE WITH DEPT.

Lansing, Oct. 28.—Last spring the fish division of the department of conservation sent our formaldehyde jars to 1,500 sportsmen in the state. The jars were to be used for the preservation of trout stomachs which the department officials wished to secure in their study of trout foods. Each sportsman was asked to fill the jars with the stomachs of trout they might catch and forward them to the department after the season closed. Jan Metzelaar, fish investigator for the state, conducted the distribution. Out of 1,500 jars shipped out, more than 500 have been returned and more are being received each day. This line piece of cooperative work has caused the department to express its appreciation. The response to the request would indicate that Michigan sportsmen are indeed interested in helping the state study its fish problems.

Mr. Metzelaar will make a thorough study of the material returned. The stomach contents will go under the microscope and the findings will be used in future work. A copy of the report that Mr. Metzelaar will make is to go to each sportsman who co-operated in the work.

RALPH HANNA COMMITS MATRIMONY

Our well known highway superintendent, Ralph Hanna, was united in marriage to Nellie Nelson on Saturday evening, October 27th. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. J. W. Greenwood at the parsonage. For many years Mr. Hanna was a resident of Grayling and a member of the County Road Commission. At present his residence is in Roscommon where it is expected the newly weds will make their home. Best wishes.

VOTE NOVEMBER 6

It is the duty of every citizen to go to the polls on November 6 and vote. No matter what your party affiliations or political beliefs are, express them by your ballot, for that privilege is one granted as a citizen by the constitution of the United States, and is a duty which too many of our citizens take too lightly.

Michigan should cast in excess of 1,500,000 votes on election day. The largest number of votes ever cast in this state was at the presidential election four years ago when there were a few more than 1,100,000 ballots registered.

It has been many years since the issues of a presidential campaign were as clearly cut as in the present one. The issues are practically all domestic, and they strike directly into the homes. Both major parties have outstanding candidates as their choice for president. Both men have long records of public service behind them. The campaign is being bitterly fought.

It is the duty of every citizen to study well the fundamental issues and to vote. Remember that cities, farms, ships, railroads and places of learning may symbolize but do not constitute a state or nation. The people are the nation. Nor is their commercial greatness a guaranty of national perpetuity. Permanence rests in the moral strength of the individual citizen. General moral weakness is a valid notice of a crumbling nationality, and it is the forerunner of the toppling of the constitution. Failure to vote is a moral weakness. So whether it be Hoover or Smith, Green or Constock, go to the polls on Tuesday, November 6, and vote.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for their kindness and beautiful expressions of sympathy extended in our recent bereavement, the death of our baby Mildred Ann. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Gierke and family. Mr. and Mrs. Adam Gierke and family.

VOTERS ARE READY

The voters of the U. S. are ready with their answer to the candidates for the presidency and vice presidency. They have been listening in on the campaign talks and reading the newspapers and magazines. They are ready for the ballot.

Just one word of caution seems important. Don't let any 11th hour campaign charge influence you in your voting. While the candidates themselves may be above such rotten political tricks, still there are many whom would gladly do the dirty work for them if permitted to do so.

There is nothing new to be said. Every act of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Smith has been scanned with microscopic care. If there are any shortcomings or irregularities on the part of either it should have been brought out long ago. Any new accusation may be classed as trumped-up and only dirty politics, not deserving of consideration.

Don't be influenced by any scandal tales. Vote for the candidate whom you honestly believe will bring us continued prosperity and happy homes. May the best man win.

AGENTS

It is not my desire to seem prejudiced in regard to the different types of agents with whom commissioners, superintendents, school secretaries and other people have to deal during the year. In the beginning it is only fair to state that quite a large number of this class observe the rules of etiquette and the common business principles that our educated people have always admired and cherished.

But there is still left not a few agents whose entire ambition seems to be to get the order, not taking into consideration whether the person with whom they wish to deal is busy or not or whether his time is obligated to other people. This man or woman comes in unceremoniously, informing you that he or she is an agent for a company in some state between Massachusetts and California and then proceeds to take your time no matter whether you are a willing listener or not. Some of them are a little inclined to be impudent if they think you do not deal with their company as much as you should and their reasoning is entirely out of place.

One agent was finding fault with one of our text books. I told him that it had been accepted by the Department. He immediately flew into a tantrum and informed me that it isn't up to the Department to accept our text books. I then ventured the opinion that I thought it was at least as much up to the department as to the book companies. Of course we know that it is not the business of the department to dictate to us in regard to the text books we shall use but it is at least always safe to advise with them.

The example given above is only one of a number of others that might be cited. In my nine year's experience in Frederick, it has been a painful duty for me to ask three agents to go. I am aware that we are living in a commercial age but when we are serving the public, I do not think we should allow this class to usurp too much of our time to add to their commercial interests.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1928

AND NOW comes the report that Hoover starved the boys in the trenches. That as food administrator during the World war he failed in his duty.

Listen! Those who served in the army at home keeping the home fires burning will recall the wonderful food organization that was functioning at that time. It reached from the central office in Washington right down to the chairman of every county in the nation. We were warned that "Food will win the war," and every loyal American was doing his best. The elimination of waste saved millions of dollars worth of food. Everything was done to save food, and boat load after boat load of supplies were carried to France for our boys.

Sherman aptly said: "War is hell!" There are no banquet tables for the front line trenches, and some times it is next to impossible to get food thru the lines at all. With warehouses filled with supplies there may be instances where it cannot be sent to the front lines.

The world knows that the food went across, and Hoover did it. Compare the task with that during the Spanish war. Right here in our own land there were regiments that nearly starved from hunger during the Spanish war. And that was a mere skirmish compared with the World war and the gigantic task of sending food to the American armies abroad and ing a lot of youngsters, but that very thing is going to be required, and the citizens have the right to expect it. There are plenty of ways to enjoy the Halloween season without destroying property.

HOOVER SURE OF ELECTION

Herbert Hoover will be elected to the presidency on November 6 with at least 50 electoral votes to spare, according to the almost unanimous opinion of news writers who have been making surveys of the entire country. The eastern states are said to be certain for him with one or two possible exceptions, the border states are leaning strongly toward him and several southern states in which Republican victory would be a tremendous upset are classed as uncertain territory. The west, as usual, will stand by the party which has contributed most to its development and the candidate which it produced. What makes the outcome so certain at this time? That can only be surmised, but certainly two factors have played an important part. They are the high type of campaign made by Herbert Hoover, who has dealt with the vital questions which will confront the next president in an intelligent, discerning manner, and the inability of the Democratic nominee, by his speeches, to convince the nation that he is as well qualified to deal with those same questions as Mr. Hoover.

VICTOR SORENSON PASSED AWAY

HAD BEEN RESIDENT OF GRAYLING SINCE 1880

Victor Sorenson, a resident of Grayling since the year 1880 passed away at his home at eight o'clock Tuesday morning following a short illness. Mr. Sorenson was taken with a stroke of paralysis Saturday afternoon, while he and Mrs. Sorenson were in the woods four miles from Grayling gathering pine knots for kindling. When he became helpless Mrs. Sorenson helped him into their automobile and then walked two miles to the highway to hail a passing car. Mr. Sorenson sank into a state of coma Saturday night never regaining consciousness.

The deceased was born in Denmark, June 6th, 1860, where he remained until he was twenty years old when he came to Grayling, some of his brothers having come to this country previously. August 30th, 1884 he was united in marriage to Miss Anna Katz at Manistee and to the union ten children were born, seven of whom survive. The family have always resided in Grayling and Mr. Sorenson for many years was employed as lumber scaler for the Salling Hanson Company.

The funeral is being held this afternoon at two o'clock with services at the Danish-Lutheran church conducted by Rev. Kjolhede. Interment will be in Elmwood cemetery.

Those surviving the deceased are his wife, four sons and three daughters, Mrs. Charles Robine, Ferdinand and Herman Sorenson, Detroit; Mrs. Charles Beck, Los Angeles, Calif.; Conrad, Harry and Miss Nina of Grayling. Also five brothers and one sister, James, George, Olaf and Rudolph Sorenson and Mrs. Waldemar Jensen all of this city and Edward Sorenson of Houghton Lake. Also 14 grandchildren.

Those from out of the city who have come to be in attendance at the funeral are Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Sorenson and son Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Sorenson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robine and two children all of Detroit; Mrs. Charles Beck, who resides in Los Angeles is unable to get here.

Mr. Sorenson was a kind husband and father and will be sadly missed from the family circle. The remaining members of the family have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

BIG AUDIENCE HEARS PRIVATE PEAT

Private Peat, in his lecture "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," opened the season's Redpath Lyceum course Wednesday night at Michelson Memorial church.

His thrilling story of war as he knew it from the "happy" day of his enlistment to the culmination of his service was a picture that his auditors will long remember. The things our soldiers usually do not tell of the gruesome scenes in the front line trenches were brot out by the speaker in all their horror. That warfare is terrible was convincingly impressed upon the audience. Histories glorify war and war makes heroes for whom bronze monuments adorn our public places, while the heroes of peace occupations are not even discovered, and nations go to war because of the lure of its glories.

Private Peat convinced his audience that war will be impossible just as soon as there is glory in peace as there is in war.

Let's Keep This Advantage For Michigan

United States Senator A. H. Vandenberg

Senator Vandenberg is the Republican candidate to succeed himself. He has a powerful place in Washington which Michigan cannot afford to lose. Vice President Dawes says he knows no Senator "who has started so auspiciously or who gives such promise of statesmanship" as Vandenberg. He has important committee places which can be reached only by the "Seniority" which he now enjoys. He has demonstrated that he is a dependable friend to Agriculture and to Labor and to Industry. He is Michigan's prime reliance in the fight for the St. Lawrence Waterway which means so much to our state. He is a man of unchallenged moral character and ideals and honor and integrity. He is one of the leading Constitutional Authorities in the United States. Michigan cannot afford to lose this advantage. Think of your own welfare when you vote for U. S. Senator. From the Ann Arbor Times we learn that Miss Alice Manwarring was married at the home of her parents in that city, to Claude F. Morris of Helena, Montana, last week Wednesday. Mr. Morris is secretary of the Union Banking & Trust Co., of Helena and they will reside in that city. The bride is well remembered by our people and will bear with her the best wishes of her many friends in Grayling.

R. P. Forbes and J. A. Everett were putting a cornice on R. Babbitt's new house one day last week, when one end of the staging fell, and as they couldn't stand on air they went down.
Everett went to the ground and was not seriously hurt, except in taking the bark off his shins and shaking him up. Forbes struck a bracket squarely across his breast where he hung until they brought a ladder and helped him down. He was brought home suffering severely but it is hoped no internal injury was sustained.

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in.

Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free

Inspection Service at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate Check distributor adjustment Check carburetor adjustment Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A checking-up by experienced mechanics, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring
every mile you drive.

Is THIRTY the Love? Deadline.

Charles G. Shaw was born in New York City in 1861, and received his early education at the Free School, later entering the Methodist Episcopal school of Yale university, from which he was graduated in 1884.
The following year he spent at the School of Agriculture at Cornell, and in 1887 wrote articles for various magazines. During the World War he was in Italy, and later, in France, and served overseas at Roscommon with the Tenth and Thirtieth regiments. He is now residing in New York City, and is a well-known author. Mr. Shaw lives in New York and is still a bachelor.

By CHARLES G. SHAW

According to the able and distinguished Dr. Will Durant, love is a hopeless business for him who has ultimately arrived at the great age of thirty. To which asseveration, I make as bold as to object. I object, what is more, for the following crystallized and, I believe, pertinent reasons:

1. Love, among several hundreds of other things, means understanding, sympathy, and consideration. None of these qualities is in the least peculiar to youth.

2. Durable adolescent love, jealous outrages, all too frequently, play unhappy but important roles. Neither of the twain involved is at all sure of the other; indeed it is rare that either is even sure of him (or her) self.
Doubt and suspicion are the double-headed issue, a destructive offspring and corrosive to romance. Free from these youthful misgivings, the fellow of middle-age will necessarily view matters in a more humane and tolerant light. Forgiveness is begot with years.

3. Love means appreciation. The appreciation of youth is never equal to that of middle-age.

4. To a man over thirty, love at once becomes a far more serious undertaking, and though admittedly a condition less frequently experienced than in the case of a man under thirty, when experienced, cuts deeper into the heart. The younger fellow half the time will cajole himself that he is in love. There is no such nonsense for the other. He knows it.

5. The assumption that a man over thirty is incapable of love is the assumption that love is a mere dash in the pan, an emotional comet. But love is not a question of a few months Nor, for that matter, of a few years.
Love is the study of a lifetime.

6. Love lends upon beauty. And rare is he who is able to behold in his twenties the beauties that exist for him to subsequent years.

7. The estimable Dr. Durant declares that "a man above thirty may go wild over a blond 'chorus' and adds: "That is not love." To the latter statement I agree. As to the former, the phrase: "go wild" is for youth, not for middle-age.

8. The doctor is of the belief, too, that one should marry at the "natural" age—in other words, the "silly" age. Yet would it not seem there are already enough divorces due to "silly" age marriages?

9. Love, for a woman, includes a touch of importance in the man. Importance comes to few of us before the first thirty years.

10. For the man over thirty, love assumes a soberer and more stable mien. He has tramped further along the road of experience and, hence, all other things being equal, will fall to succumb with the same degree of ease as his younger brother. Moreover, his falling in love is more exciting.
His is the subtler skill also in the tenderness of amour, which art, incidentally, must be learned as all other arts, for while one's groundwork, garnered in the flush of youth, is undeniably necessary, it is the technique acquired in riper years that lends the essential quality to the prime product. Behind lies that ephemeral period (Dr. Durant's "natural" age), when the first comingling of a shingle-headed flapper caused our hero to swallow his wad of chewing gum, clutch his coat just below the handkerchief pocket, and rush headlong to the nearest jeweler's.

11. It is a different type of love, true enough, that comes to a man after thirty. But surely it is a soldier, surer, and stancher type—a love, in fine, that makes for the possibilities of an ever-enduring devotion.

12. In conclusion, I would note the names of a few men over thirty, who it would appear, have most certainly been capable of falling in love—to wit: Robert Browning, at the age of thirty-three; Honoré de Balzac, at thirty-four; Otto Eduard Leopold von Bismarck at thirty-one; Horatio Nelson, at forty; Aaron Burr, at thirty-eight; Heinrich Heine, at thirty-seven; Francis Marie Arrouet de Voltaire, at thirty-nine; Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, at thirty-eight; Blaise Pascal at thirty-one; Jean Jacques Rousseau at thirty-three; Napoleon I, at forty-one; Goya y Lucientes, at forty-five; Julius Caesar, at fifty-two; Louis XIV, at forty-two; Wilhelm Richard Wagner, at fifty-seven; Luigi Cornaro at seventy-nine; Thomas Parr, at eighty. . . . But why continue?
History, the arts, science, government, industry—life in all its phases—is rich with such examples.

UNDISCOVERED COUNTRIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

To most of us the places we have not ourselves seen are virtually undiscovered countries. All that we know about them is what we have heard or read and what we have thus discovered is usually the worst. Now there is Africa.

It looks to me like a huge reversed capital letter P on the map, and it con-notes to me wild elephants, desert wastes, untraversed jungles teeming with strange animals and deadly serpents. It is a land of unclothed savages with rings in their noses and poisoned arrows in the quivers which they carry on their backs. My cousin Tracy has just come from Africa and his account of what he has seen there is quite different from the picture which I have painted of that, to me, undiscovered country. There are Ford cars in Africa, Tracy tells me, and radios and moving picture shows, and water softeners, and electric lights, and hard roads, and the girls bob their hair and carry lipstick just as they do in other civilized countries.
I have been quite mistaken in my judgment of Africa.

When Nancy and I were in Cambridge, Mass., 25 years ago or so, we got our meals with a group of dyed-in-the-wool New Englanders. One woman had been out West, she said—that is as far as Troy, N. Y., but none of them had ever looked across the Mississippi river, and they looked upon us as semi-civilized savages from a wild and unconquered West. They believed everything we told them about rattlesnakes, buffaloes, and Indian raids. They were astonished that we were able with a little dialect as we showed to communicate in the English language. The Mississippi valley to them was an undiscovered country.
While, whom I later met, born in New England and imbued with a holy desire to do something to raise the moral and religious standards of the illiterate West, had a call to Austin, Texas, as assistant pastor of one of the southern churches. He was courageous but wary. He asked me confidentially, as of one who had had wide experiences in such things than himself, if I didn't think it would be a wise precaution for him to take pistols with him in going to so dangerous a locality.

I was in Herrin, Ill., a few weeks ago—Herrin in bloody Williamson county. It is a beautiful little city with a wide clean boulevard running through it 100 feet wide. It seems like a quiet well-ordered place. It is full of comfortable houses sitting in the midst of well-kept lawns and surrounded by beautiful gardens. It was in rose time that I was there, and I have never seen anywhere, not even in England nor in Italy, more beautiful roses than there were in Herrin. They have beautiful school buildings. I do not know another city of 10,000 population which has a better designed and more attractive high school building than Herrin. The people seem to love beauty and to stand for education.
Maybe we have not discovered Herrin!

Marvelous Work of New Konjola Medicine Told

Mac & Gidley Drug Store To Introduce Advanced Remedy For First Time In Grayling

If you were told that one single medicine put hundreds of men and women back to work in Indianapolis, and other large cities after they had been idle for months with health

G. H. MOSBY

Discoverer of Konjola

troubles, it would sound impossible, wouldn't it? And that countless people were completely relieved of rheumatism and neuritis, that they were able to walk again, without cane or crutches, and that this same medicine restored health to men and women who had suffered with stomach and kidney troubles for years, that complete relief had come in cases of misery where health resorts, expensive treatments and medicine upon medicine had failed—indeed it seems impossible. Yet it is all true and the medicine that has done all these things is the new Konjola, which is being introduced starting today at the Mac & Gidley Drug Store, Grayling.

Wherever introduced, this Konjola is vastly different and more effective in thousands of cases of ill-health than any previously known medicine.
It is a remarkable well-known compound for the following well-known troubles:

RHEUMATISM: Especially severe cases, where the joints are stiff and rigid. In the milder cases of this disease, Konjola relieves almost at once, and this medicine brings the same results to the neuritis victim that it produces for the rheumatic sufferers.

STOMACH, LIVER, KIDNEYS AND BOWEL TROUBLES: Nearly all forms of misery that arise from these unhealthy organs have been so quickly relieved by Konjola that men and women sufferers everywhere were surprised. It is the action of this medicine on the organs of the inner-system that removes toxic poisons from the system and brings quick relief in so many cases. The secret of this Konjola is the way it acts on the important functional organs of the body namely, the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. So many diseases and long standing disorders of these organs were so completely conquered and entirely banished by this new compound that thousands of people in larger cities were able to give up taking medicine for time to come.

After the great accomplishments and wonderful work of Konjola in other sections, it is declared that this medicine is what hundreds of sufferers in Grayling and vicinity have long needed to actually reach their cases, and preparations are being made to introduce Konjola for the first time at the Mac & Gidley Drug Store, where this medicine will be sold and explained to the public daily.

Alfred Noyes, alleged British poet, has now performed the ceremony of "debunking" Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, finding that as literature it is "all wet." But we doubt whether this action will make a big noise out of Mr. Noyes.

You may think this is a hot campaign we are having until you read in the papers that 200,000 people have been slain in China in the last month or two in a religious war.

New models and THE OPEN MIND

THE public, with its healthy desire for the new and the better, insists upon continuous improvement, and will withdraw its patronage from any product or service which stands still.

Nowhere is this more true than in the automobile industry. The car is more than a utility.
It is a personal thing, involving your convenience, your comfort, your safety, your sense of beauty and color, your pride of ownership, your complete environment for many hours of your life. Customs and habits of living change fast; and the past holds many warnings of how quickly your favor can shift when an automobile, for even a single year, fails to show progress.

So continuous improvement is more than a policy with General Motors. It is a vital necessity.

THE PUBLIC DEMANDS NEW MODELS

And the public is right. Out of that demand have come electric starting and lighting, the closed body, Duco finish, four-wheel brakes and hundreds of refinements, big and little. Improvements that might have taken a generation have been born within a few years because people want greater performance, beauty and comfort.

Equipped with the largest research laboratories, proving ground and body building plants, and guided by an Open Mind which is ready to revise its thinking in response to new facts, General Motors believes that it is peculiarly fitted not only to sense but to anticipate public demand and to give the people better automobiles at better values year after year.

As evidence of that faith we presented some months ago the New Chevrolet, the New Pontiac, the New Oldsmobile. And now we offer, with equal pride, the New Buick, the New Cadillac, the New LaSalle and the New Oakland.

CHEVROLET. 7 Bigger and Better

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Politics Grows Hot as the Presidential Campaign Draws to a Close.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WITH the end of the campaign in sight, politics was sizzling and all other news was subordinated to that relating to the race for the Presidency. Candidate Hoover invaded Candidate Smith's territory in a speech in New York city and sharply denounced the Smith policies; and he was ably seconded by Charles Evans Hughes in speeches in St. Joseph, Mo., and Chicago. Candidate Smith came right back at them with a lively address before a wildly enthusiastic audience in Boston. The Democratic cause was bolstered by the action of Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, who announced that he was supporting Smith and began a series of speeches in his behalf.

Unprejudiced observers were intensely interested in the nonpartisan post-card poll conducted by the Literary Digest. Almost complete returns announced by that publication showed Hoover holding a strong lead over Smith "with impressive indications that the Republicans may capture several states in the 'Solid South' that have been Democratic for more than fifty years." Of a grand total of over 2,700,000 votes tabulated Hoover had 1,717,041 and Smith polled 971,850, a ratio of approximately 63 to 35.

These returns showed Hoover ahead in every state except Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina, which Smith was carrying with ample reserves. The Republican plurality shown in Alabama and Arkansas was so slight that the Literary Digest classed the outcome in both states as doubtful. In Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, called doubtful by many political authorities, this poll showed Hoover leading by odds as high as 2 1/2 to 1.

In a separate section of the poll in which the entire electorate of several large cities was polled Smith had a decided advantage in New York city with 158,000 votes to Hoover's 103,847, while Hoover led in Chicago by 98,363 to 70,769, and in Philadelphia by 63,494 to 48,172.

IN HIS new York speech Hoover devoted much attention to Smith's proposals concerning liquor, traffic, agricultural relief and hydro-electric power, asserting that, if adopted, they would be "a long step toward the abandonment of our American system and a surrender to the destructive operation of governmental conduct of commercial business." He said the "bureaucratizing of the business of our country" is a false liberalism, and the Democratic proposals he denounced as only a step toward state socialism.

Al Smith's retort to this was most vigorous and highly pleased the delirious 14,000 who heard him in Boston and cheered as he denounced the Republicans as reactionaries. "The cry of socialism," he said, "has been patented by the powerful interests that desire to put a damper on progressive legislation. Failing to meet the arguments fairly and squarely, special interest falls back on the old stock phrase of 'socialism.' The people of New York state are tired of the stock argument, have discovered that it means nothing, that it is simply subterfuge and camouflage, and I am satisfied that the people of the nation in their wisdom will so appraise it.

"As far as all these problems are concerned, I have certainly used words to convey my meaning, and I have not attempted to conceal it, and it made no difference in what part of the country I was talking.

"To refer to the remedies for all these evils as state socialism is not constructive statesmanship. It is not leadership, and leadership is what this country is hungry for today. It has not had it in the last eight years, and it has little prospect of it in the four to come in the event of Republican success."

MANY political wiseacres figured that Hoover lost votes in Wisconsin and perhaps in Minnesota and the Dakotas by his attack on Smith's proposals as state socialism, for those proposals are practically identical with the ideas of the late Senator La Follette and his son, the present senator. The LaFollette vote, it was asserted, was now almost consolidated against Hoover. Californians, too, objected to the Republican candidate's reiterated views on water power as they applied to the Boulder dam project. The effect of Senator Norris' coming out for Smith was uncertain, though he has a large personal following. Through Charles Evans Hughes in his addresses scored what he called Smith's "claptrap," he conceded to Al most of the good qualities and achievements claimed for him by the Democrats, but he then set forth at length the reasons why he preferred Hoover as President. He denounced religious intolerance, and asserted that the prohibition question offered only a sham battle.

ACCORDING to an announcement by Secretary of War Davis, operations on the government project for controlling the flood waters of the Mississippi river are proceeding so rapidly that it is now almost certain the entire appropriation of $24,000,000 for work this year will be expended or obligated before June 30, 1926.

"To date," Mr. Davis said, "sixty-five contracts have been let for levee work involving the movement of 15,194,500 cubic yards of material. In addition, work involving placement of 6,709,000 cubic yards is being done.

It is proposed to undertake still more levee work this year which will bring the total expenditures for this class of work from the current appropriation up to about $10,000,000."

HAVING completed its inquiry into the publicity phases of the propaganda methods of public utility companies, the federal trade commission ran up against a snag and its investigation was halted. It proposed to scrutinize the books of the concerns, but the officials of the Electric Bond and Share company of New York refused to testify as witnesses. It was then up to the commission to seek aid in the federal courts, with the prospect of many months of litigation.

The right of the commission to compel industries to open their books has been challenged several times in recent years, and the probability that just such a controversy as that precipitated by the Electric Bond and Share company would develop to block the inquiry led Senator Walsh to urge that a special senate committee be created to conduct the power probe.

OSCAR F. GRAB, founder of the women's wear firm of O. F. Grab & Co., of New York, will become vice president of a new bank at the end of the year and announced that at that time he will transfer the entire business of the company, amounting to $1,000,000, as a gift to 14 persons who have been in his employ for from five to eighteen years. Mr. Grab came from Vienna to the United States and began work at $3 a week.

AS THE climax of a conference on major industries at Columbia university, New York, some two thousand persons gathered at a banquet in the Hotel Astor paid tribute to seven pioneers of American industry. The honored guests were Henry Ford, representing the automobile industry; Orville Wright, aviation; Thomas A. Edison, invention; Charles M. Schwab, iron and steel; Julius Rosenwald, merchandising; George Eastman, photography; and Harvey S. Firestone, rubber. Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher, and Glenn H. Curtiss, airplane manufacturer, were kept away by illness. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler presided and introduced the guests, and the principal speaker was Lord Melchett of England, chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd. Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City bank, told the audience that danger in the current financial situation seemed to be "largely psychological." "I do not think we have need at the moment to be fearful," said Mr. Mitchell. "I cannot see what is going to disturb the situation. I believe that we are more likely to move out of the troublesome times that are seen by many at the moment into comparatively clear waters, because this country, in its present state of prosperity, is piling up savings so fast and those savings are flowing so rapidly into the security account that the loan account should come down even if the price level advance to some extent."

PUBLICATION by the British foreign office of the text of the Anglo-French naval limitation agreement that caused so much unfavorable comment revealed little new, but aroused the London newspapers to fresh denunciations of the stupidity of those who negotiated the deal which was killed by the opposition of the United States and Italy. The published correspondence shows that, as was supposed, England sold its opposition to France's trained military reserves on the army problem, despite almost solid opposition from the rest of the continental powers, and France in exchange threw overboard its demand for global tonnage limitation for navies, and slid over to the support of the London admiralty's demand for restriction by categories.

FRENCH MINISTER OF JUSTICE Barthou is putting the brakes on the American divorce industry in France. At the opening of the courts where Americans present their pleas for divorce he warned the judges and lawyers to give the strictest surveillance to all petitions filed by foreigners. Regulations have been so tightened that there is talk of transferring the base of American divorce operations to another country where the requirements are not so severe. Switzerland may be selected.

RESUMPTION of anti-Semitic riots in Budapest last week were so serious that the authorities closed four universities. Students and workmen fought fierce street battles, and there was a hot debate in parliament that ended in a challenge to a duel. The outbreaks among the students started several weeks ago, when they alleged that the government was foisting upon the institutions a greater proportion of Jewish students than was allowed by law.

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON, one of the most popular and successful of American novelists of the day, died suddenly in New York while a guest at a luncheon. He had been under treatment for heart disease for 18 months. Mr. McCutcheon, who was born in Indiana 62 years ago, made his first big hit with the romance "Graustark" in 1901. This was followed by many other stories which won him fame and a large fortune. Another notable work passed away last week was Adolf Kraus of Chicago, who for 30 years was a leader of the Jewish race in this country. He was also well known as a lawyer and a public official.

Gaetano, Cardinal de Lai, died in Rome after a long illness. With his demise, for the first time in the annals of the Catholic church the foreign cardinals outnumber the Italians in the sacred organization. This preponderance of foreigners may be prolonged by the new appointments and might conceivably result in the election of a non-Italian pope on the death of Pius XI.

Charles A. Towne, former United States senator from Minnesota, died in Tucson, Ariz., while on a speaking tour for Smith and Robinson.

IN THE house of bishops at the general convention of Episcopalians in Washington the following resolution, introduced by the bishop of Erie, was adopted:

"Resolved, That, facing the danger of the spirit of lawlessness in American life, we welcome the renewed efforts of the government of the United States to enforce strictly and impartially the prohibition laws and the antinarcotic laws, which are so widely and cynically disregarded. And we call upon the people of our church to set a good example of that obedience to law without which no democracy can endure."

CHANGING ONE'S THOUGHTS

By THOMAS ANKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I was talking to Shafer not long ago concerning his son who has not proved a particularly good influence in the organization to which he belongs. He is a very radical thinker. Now I may have done him an injustice in making this statement, for I have not yet been convinced that young Shafer has done a great deal of real thinking; what I should have said is that he is a somewhat wild and unbalanced talker. He claims not to believe in such actions as God and temperance and virtue and unselfish co-operation of any sort, and some of his putty-brained associates take him seriously.

"It is quite possible and necessary I can see," Mr. Shafer admitted to me, "for George to stop talking so much, but of course he cannot control his thoughts. You don't object to his thinking these things, do you?"

My answer to his final question for this purpose irrelevant, it is his statement that it is impossible for one to control his thoughts with which I take issue. Thought is not a process beyond our control; education, in the main, consists in learning how to direct and develop and control thought processes.

"I can't get down to studying" is as common and as imbecile a statement from freshmen as that "I can never learn to spell." In each instance there is usually very little desire to do the thing mentioned. One can manage his own thoughts and one can learn judgment and reason and one can even change his opinions through reading and observation and serious reflection. If one could not change his thoughts school and college and educational processes of all sorts would be useless. If George's brain is so hardened that he cannot change his thoughts then his father is wasting good money in sending him to college—the boy in such a case would be only a machine controlled and limited in its actions by its own mechanical construction.

Concentration, a mental attitude which we all attempt to cultivate and in which some of us succeed, is simply another name for the ability to direct our thoughts to one thing to the exclusion of others. Of course what George's father meant is that George need not give expression to his opinions or to his beliefs, but that he cannot change these points of view. If at seventeen, he feels that virtue and honesty are negligible qualities, there is nothing to be done about it. If he considers law an Old Man of the Sea clinging to his neck only to impede his progress, that settles the matter. But if George will use his head a little, if he will take time to look about him, if by study and contemplation he can really learn to think logically, he will find it quite easy in many instances completely to change his thoughts.

RIGID TRAINING FOR NAVY AVIATORS

Information received from the Navy Recruiting Station at Detroit, Michigan, indicates that the Navy of the United States is determined to have a well trained aviation personnel. Since Congress, in 1926, decided to increase the air force of the nation, the facilities for training aviation pilots at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Florida, have been practically doubled. A recent consignment of new planes has further improved this station. In the cars and upkeep of aircraft, over 1,000 men are instructed each year at Great Lakes, Illinois and other stations.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Discovery of Neptune Because they felt that an irregularity in the movement of Uranus was due to the influence of an undiscovered heavenly body, astronomers in 1846 deliberately calculated the position of this possible disturber and found it. This new planet they called Neptune. It is thought to be the farthest away of any in the solar system.

TRAINING FORD MECHANICS

Absolute uniformity of service on the new Ford Model "A" cars and Model "AA" trucks is being maintained by the Ford Motor Company through a plan which involves the training in the Ford plants, of ten thousand garage mechanics. The Ford branch plants, and the Detroit factories have assumed the character of a gigantic training school, to which every Ford dealer in the United States is sending one or more representatives.

This school for service men began with the training of superintendents and foremen of the thirty-six branch plants of the company in the United States. Before the Model "A" Ford car was introduced, these men from the branch plants were being schooled in the manufacture and assembly of the new car. They returned to the thirty-six Ford branches and immediately began the training of men for dealers in their respective territories.

The men come in relays, each group as large as the branch plant can handle conveniently. The groups are purposely kept small, in order that the most intensive training can be given. Each man is put through the same course given the branch men at Detroit, and upon its completion is given a rigorous examination. This examination includes many points about the car which might not be considered essential from the service man's viewpoint. However, the Ford Company is requiring complete knowledge of the car on the part of every dealer's service men. Failure to make a passing grade means that the man has to take the entire course again. If he fails a second time, he is sent back to the dealer with the suggestion that he is not considered qualified to give Ford service; whereupon, the dealer sends another man for the next training school session. This requirement for trained service men extends to every Ford dealer no matter how small his establishment may be. Many dealers have sent two or more men to the branch for training. Upon passing the factory examination, these men return to the dealers' shops and pass on to the entire shop organizations the same careful instruction given at the branches.

Commander Byrd has set out for the South Pole without even waiting for the election returns.

AVIATION NOTES

Navy Recruiting Station, Detroit, Michigan:—The aerial squadrons serving with the second Brigade, U. S. Marines, based at Managua, Nicaragua, have had eighty-four contacts with outlaws during the past year, one third of which were minor brushes. The planes have been struck fifty-nine times by fire from the ground, with one casualty, a pilot having been shot through the foot at Murra last March, when Sandino's main body was hit. A total of 900,000 pounds (450 tons) of freight and one thousand five hundred passengers have been transported by planes to the hill stations.

Now that they have started sending freight from Germany over here by dirigible it may be a little more difficult to collect the tariff.

The new Buick is the new Style

Men and women on every street--in every city and town--are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day.

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher! Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized--when imitation was destroying individuality--these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode--A mode of body symmetry--of size and magnificence--of soft contours instead of straight lines--of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world! And as the weeks have passed--and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent to the public--enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grown to unprecedented proportions! Buick sales records have been broken! Production schedules have been increased again and again! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.
